

The Mildmay Club Available Now

The Mildmay Club is an authentic example of a traditional Working Men's Club. Established in 1888, it is one of the very last untouched Working Men's Clubs in London. The front is red brick with restrained baroque detailing and internal original features include 1960s & 70s decor.

The club boasts a large main hall with proscenium arch stage, dance floor, high ceilings, balcony and bar. Upstairs is the minor hall with its own bar and raised stage area, flooded with natural light, bedecked with original 1970s furniture and fittings. In the basement is the members bar, filled with memorabilia of a bygone era. Our hidden gem, a vast original Victorian snooker hall, one of London's oldest and largest, equipped with 9 tables, an incredible collection of cues. The room sits under the watchful eye of old father time by way of a 3ft wide brass clock.

The Mildmay has long been a popular choice for discerning film, television, music videos and photo shoots, it is a diverse location which, with minimal dressing, can lend itself to many different scenarios, locations and eras.

There is room for costume, hair and make up on site. We can often have arrangements for tech parking on weekends and school holidays, and via Hackney Council at all other times. Travel time from central London is about 30 minutes.

What was cool in 1969 looks incredible 50 years on.

*"One of London's few remaining genuine Working Men's Clubs.
A film friendly cinematic jewel. Still Amazing and still here."*

- Ben Mangham (Location Manager)
