

And David O'Relly and Jon Klassen Made "Black Lake"

This four minutes video loop does not fit into any category but we choose CG creations for some good reason, as always

January 27, 2010 - 20:27

When David O'Relly, with 24 awards behind, and the canadian Jon Klassen met past October in Berlin, they thought to make something for the "If You Could Collaborate" project. The idea behind this show was to pick someone you had not worked with and work on something together. The result is something they were both really happy with. Jon Klassen was in on the conceptualizing of the thing, sort of the visual rules and value setups and stuff and then designing the elements, and David took it from there. Black Lake is a short made to be shown in a gallery, it is meant to be played on a loop. 3Dup.com has edited the video and added just two loops as a sample of the endless effect.

```
div.overlay { width:1040px; height:644px; }
#imgplay { margin:88px 0px 0px 190px; }
#player { background:no-repeat url('/videos/news/2010/january/blacklake.jpg') top center; }
#splash, #player, #player embed, #player object { width:560px; height:340px; }
```

More Information at www.davidoreilly.com and www.burstofbeaden.com. Image and Video Courtesy of David O'Relly and Jon Klassen. Video Montage and Encoding: 3Dup.com