Just before Princess Fiona's rescue by Shrek in the original Shrek film, King Harold and Queen Lillian are revealed to have come to the magic deal-maker Rumpelstiltskin for help with breaking Fiona's curse. King Harold is about to sign a contract to break the curse in exchange for Rumpelstiltskin becoming king of Far, Far Away, but word comes that Fiona has been rescued, causing King Harold to decline the offer. A disgruntled Rumpelstiltskin in the present day wishes that Shrek was never born, vowing vengeance.

Meanwhile, Shrek has grown tired of his life being a local celebrity and his overwhelming family and friends, as well as the fact he feels he isn't a "real ogre" anymore. Rumpelstiltskin meets Shrek and offers him a day to feel like a real ogre again, in exchange for a day from Shrek's childhood. Shrek agrees and signs the contract.
