Part I

Airmont Books was a subsidiary of Thomas Bouregy and Co. Bouregy was a minor hardcover publisher whose biggest success was with lending library imprints, primarily Avalon Books. Lending library publishers were generally considered the bottom feeders in the book trade, paying less than most pulp magazines for "all rights" to novels whose authors would never see another dime.

As the number of paperback book publishers proliferated in the 1950s, the insatiable market for reprints prompted some publishers to mine the backlists of lending library publishers like Phoenix Press, Arcadia House and Avalon Books. Apparently Bouregy decided that they might make more money if they published their own paperback editions, rather than licensing them to established paperback houses. Thus was born Airmont Books. A short description of the new imprint appeared in Publishers' Weekly, October 2, 1961. The books were offered to wholesalers at a very deep discount on a non-returnable basis, which suggests that they would only be sold through discount department stores and not on newsstands.

Most lending library books are formulaic, readily identifiable, genre fiction. It is not surprising then that Airmont's first paperbacks were reprints of these genre books, in separately numbered sequences, with identifying prefix letters. There were separate series for mysteries, westerns and science fiction, and three series dedicated to types of romances. The seventh series' genre, with an "F" prefix, is less obvious, the miscellaneous nature of the volumes suggests that it may have stood for "Fiction." The earliest of these series were issued in January 1962; the last titles seem to have been issued around October 1964. All of the titles in these series were reprints of Bouregy's own hardcovers, with no additional payments to the authors.

The announced publication schedule was for 5 or 6 books a month but the actuality fell far short of that. All the books in these series have a stated printing date (month and year) on the copyright page, but the compiler's knowledge of these dates is spotty for some series. The data at hand seem to indicate that books in a given series were issued at 3- or 4-month intervals until mid-1964 when they appear to have accelerated to bi-monthly. There is no evidence that any of these titles had multiple printings but since they never carried ads, it would be difficult to tell. The listings for these series are believed to be complete but the "F" series is less well documented and may have had additional titles.

In December 1962 a line of "Classics" was begun, reprinting prominent books in the public domain, covering the whole range of literature, including fiction, non-fiction, poetry and plays. This series seems to have been extremely successful, issuing 209 known titles through May 1970. Unlike the genre series, the Classics did not give printing dates; all the known dates come from the copyright registrations. They were issued in groups, once or twice a year, usually in contiguous blocks. For some reason the numbers in the last group were scattered over a wide range with several numbers not being used; nonetheless, this list is believed to be complete. A separate sequence of Shakespeare reprints was begun in October 1965 and produced a further 24 titles by September 1968. Virtually all of the public domain reprints featured new introductions, a preponderance of them, for no known reason, by Canadian academics.

Many of the children's titles contained illustrations, many being reprinted from old hardcovers, some apparently new.

The Classics are known to have had multiple printings. These can be spotted by changes in the ads at the back of the books, but only if there were enough pages available to print an up-to-date list of titles. These house ads came in a standard format, eventually running to three pages in length. If only one or two pages were available for ads, only the pages with the lowest book numbers would be printed, making it difficult to identify later printings from such truncated ads. In short, you can sometimes tell if you're looking at a later printing, if the ads contain seriously higher book numbers than the book itself, but most of the time the ads, or lack thereof, are uninformative.

Cover prices in the Classics series varied considerably depending on the size of each book, but remained the same through all printings of a given title, even seven years later.

At random times between 1961 and 1968 four non-fiction books were issued, numbered into three separate series. No other titles are presently known but these are particularly elusive so there may be more. Most of these have not been seen and no information is available regarding possible later printings.

The nature of the material in the Classics line has severely taxed this compiler's expertise. The usual formats developed for these paperback indexes have proven sadly inadequate when dealing with public domain reprints whose sources may be several hundred years old. Identifying the first edition, or even the first American edition, is often impossible. The problems are even worse when dealing with translated works, since it is necessary to identify the exact translation as well in order to identify the relevant "first" edition. I have therefore settled on the following compromises:

For any book originally published before about 1860 I have generally identified only the date of first publication and the country (United States, if not stated otherwise). A few earlier titles have more detail, if the information was easily obtained, but no great effort was made to find it. For non-translated works after 1860, I have tried to identify the first edition, although even this has proven difficult for some British children's books. For translated works in this later period, when no credit was given in the books themselves, an attempt was made to collate the texts against the various versions which have been scanned and posted online. Not all of Airmont's translated works were available to me. Some of those that were available could not be matched to any online texts. Even when the texts could be matched, the scanned editions didn't always identify the translators either. Half of the translators remain unidentified, with half of those not being seen. The Author Index entries for identified translators attempt to cite the first English language publication for each translated text, but again, only for English language editions first published after 1860.

Several of the Classics were "double novels," featuring two books by the same author. I have treated all such books as Omnibuses, and listed their components in the Author-Books Index rather than the Author-Contents Index.

The organization of the Author-Contents Index has also required some adjustment. The large amount of anonymous material of a folkloric or mythic nature has necessitated sub-categorizing much of that material to group like things and identify multiple versions of the same material. I have never attempted anything of this complexity before; I hope the results will be found informative.

Virtually all of the Airmont Books carry the notice "complete and unabridged." I have not bothered to annotate it. In the course of tracking down the prior editions of the translated books I found several instances where the Airmont text contained noticeably less text than the scanned hardcover. It would appear that in some instances Airmont chose to reprint texts that had already been edited for younger readers. This may have been done through carelessness, or done deliberately; if they reprinted in its entirety an already edited text they could deceptively claim it was complete. I have not attempted to compare any of the non-translated works; it is possible that some of those were similarly edited, though the enormous size of some Airmont Classics would suggest a preference for completeness. Due to the constraints of reprinting only out-of-copyright material, they are known to have used out-dated or unreliable editions of works that have since seen much better versions published.

The various introductions are not particularized in the numerical lists, even for books with itemized contents, because they would be a major interruption of the format. However, for those who might wish to see the pattern of authorship, they are all listed numerically in the Contents-Title Index under "Introduction."

An interesting oddity: the "M" series of Airmont Books reprints books originally issued by Mystery House, another Bouregy hardcover imprint. This series suspended for about two years after # 3; when it resumed, the imprint was changed from Airmont Books to Mystery House. Ironically, all those Mystery House paperbacks were reprints of romantic suspense novels published by Avalon Books!

Within the genre series there were 33 romances, 12 westerns, 8 science fiction, 7 mysteries and 3 adventure books. Two volumes were short story collections; all the rest were novels. Assigning genres to the material in the Classics line has not been attempted; many of these works predate the concept of genre fiction and would be hard to categorize with present-day terminology. 23 of the classics were non-fiction, 8 were volumes of verse and 6 were volumes of plays. These statistics do not include the separate Shakespeare series, which included one volume of verse. Most volumes were reprints, but several volumes of short stories appear to be original compilations and a few of the double novels do not seem to have been previously published in these exact combinations. Apart from the two volumes of fairy tales there is only one anthology, which appears to be original.

Part II

All of the foregoing would probably be sufficient to describe Airmont Books' brief existence if that was where its story ended. However, most of Airmont's titles came in and out of print for many years afterwards, in a two-pronged program that almost defies coherent description.

On the one hand, the Classics line, including the separate Shakespeare line, as well as one or more of the non-fiction books, went back to press repeatedly. There are so many titles involved and so many later printings that documentation is too spotty to detail them all. It is sufficient to say that variant editions with higher prices exist and that, when examined, what appear to be printing dates are given at the end of the last text pages. Prices as high as $4.95 have been spotted and dates as late as "6/97" have been documented. The volumes appear otherwise identical, with updates to the advertising pages being the only textual changes. All the volumes were sold through the usual venues and were catalogued regularly in Paperbound Books in Print.

On the other hand, most, perhaps all, of the volumes in the 7 genre series were brought back sporadically as part of a publishing phenomenon that has been little documented and rarely discussed.

In the mid-1970's the markets were swamped with copies of paperbacks that gave the appearance of having been published several years earlier (going by the cover prices), discovered in a warehouse and marked down to be disposed of as "remainders." These were in fact newly printed books with deceptive cover prices (under which they had never been offered for sale) that were sold at a deep discount to department stores like Woolworth's and K-Mart on a non-returnable basis. The stores then sold them at "bargain" prices, generally 25¢ or 3 for $1.00.

The most visible (and notorious) of these fake remainders was Magnum Books. In the wake of Lancer Books' bankruptcy in 1973, hundreds of their titles were reissued as Magnum Books, by a company called Prestige Books Inc. Prestige also reissued most of the volumes in Lancer's romance imprint, Valentine Books, all of which were reprints of hardcover books. In that instance the Valentine Books imprint was preserved on the reprints.

A large number of Airmont Books were reissued this way, probably by Bouregy themselves, since their distribution system remained the same. These reprints also contain date codes on the last text page, dates that make it obvious that the books were too recent to have been sold at their stated cover prices. Reprints of Airmont's genre series have been seen dated 12-72 and 5-73 (both priced at 60¢) and 1-76 (at 95¢). Books priced at $1.50 have begun to surface recently but none of those volumes that have been examined have printing dates. As previously noted, the F series is particularly hard to document and it is not presently known whether any of those books were included in the remainder program. It is difficult to prove a negative, but these reprints were never listed in Paperbound Books in Print, nor do they appear to have been sold by mail-order, so it is doubtful that they were ever sold at cover price.

As with the Classics reprints, the genre reprints appear to be facsimiles of the original printings. However, two instances are known where the reprints have different covers, swapped in from other Airmont Books. A $1.50 reprint of N2 uses the cover from N7. A 60¢ reprint of W1 uses the cover from W4. In neither case have I been able to document a higher-priced reprint of the book that the cover was swapped from.

All this is confusing enough, but in 1976 something even stranger happened. The Canadian romance publisher Harlequin Books had steadily increased their penetration into the US markets during the 1970s, which apparently fueled a growing demand for more "category" romances in paperback. One of the publishers that noticed this was Prestige Books. Their remaindered Valentine Books imprint suddenly began reprinting additional hardcover titles that had not been previously issued by Lancer or Valentine.

Intriguingly, Airmont Books also began issuing new titles in their Romance (R-) series, all of which were, as before, reprints of Avalon Books hardcovers. An additional 41 titles are presently known to have been issued under the remainder program, in two groups. The first group, comprising numbers R-7 to R-22, were initially priced at $1.25. All volumes examined had a stated printing date of April 1976 but lacked the usual date codes at the end of the text. They were all reprints of Bouregy hardcovers issued between 1971 and 1973. The second group, numbers R-23 to R-47 (the highest number presently known) were priced at $1.50; they were all reprints of Bouregy hardcovers issued in 1976 and 1977, but lack any stated or implied publication dates. Copies of numbers R-7 through R-22 were also issued at $1.50; they probably came out at the same time as the later group. These too lack any printing codes. These last romances may have been issued at the same time as the other genre reprints at this price but as mentioned above none of those have been found with printing codes either. Based on the lag time between the hardcover editions and the paperback editions of R-7 through R-22, the later volumes probably came out around 1980, but they remain frustratingly undatable.

Sadly after many years of searching there is still one number that has not been identified, nor is there any way to be sure that any higher numbers don't exist. All of these additional romance titles are listed in an appendix for completeness, but since it was not my intention to document the remainder reprints, they are not cross-referenced in any way.

While searching for the missing title above, I inadvertently acquired a copy of an Airmont Romance in trade paperback format, which baffles me completely. It is essentially a paperbound copy of an Avalon hardcover, priced at $1.95, with no publication date. I have not located it in any volumes of Paperbound Books in Print or the Cumulative Book Index consulted between 1973 and 1980. It does not seem likely to have been issued with the "remainders," above. It may have been issued for some kind of book club; for the time being it remains an unexplained anomaly. The information for this book is given at the end of the appendix.

All told Airmont Books published 347 different titles, including the 47 later romances. Almost all had illustrated covers. 264 covers are displayed in the Bookscans database. Another 33 have been seen elsewhere. The unseen covers are mostly romances. The covers displayed in Bookscans are a mixture of different printings, with some titles displaying multiple printings. The count of titles above is only of the number of different titles, regardless of which edition, or how many editions, are displayed. Both versions of W1 are displayed, but neither of N2. There are no cover credits and only a handful are signed. All known volumes with interior illustrations are detailed, even though most of them are uncredited.

I have credited Jerry Boyajian with a well-earned “assist” on this Index. I compared notes with Jerry when I started working actively to convert my simple files into this full-scale bibliography; neither of us had many Classics beyond the SF titles. To my delight, when comparing notes a year later I discovered that we had both added substantially to our holdings of that series, each with a markedly different subset of titles. His help and advice with this compilation has been invaluable in many other ways and I am pleased to acknowledge his assistance once again. Several people, including Jerry, my wife Kathy Godfrey, Glenna Siddons Dorsay and Jean Berman perused the folkloric section of the Contents Index and provided feedback on the format. Their comments, besides the snarky ones about my sanity, were all appreciated. My good friend and mentor Victor Berch passed away during the production of this index and I regret that I was not able to avail myself of his talents as heavily as in my past endeavors. His death is a great loss to bibliographers in many fields; I am now truly working “without a net.” Once again, my wife Kathy proofread the text portions of this index to increase my apparent literacy. Considering the enormous size and complexity of this index, errors undoubtedly abound; additions and corrections are welcomed.

CL65 75¢ Dickens, Charles David Copperfield J. F. [© 7/23] 1965

(Collection, reprint, abridged. Title usually given as Twice-Told, only correct here in the running head. First version published by American Stationers Co. in 1837. This edition reprints from the expanded second edition from James Munroe, 1842. In spite of its claim to be "complete and unabridged" this edition is missing 4 stories. I have not been able to identify any previous edition with this exact line-up so the abridgement is probably original with Airmont.)

Contents:

- 11 The Gray Champion
- 17 The Wedding Knell
- 24 The Minister's Black Veil: A Parable
- 34 The Maypole of Merry Mount
- 43 The Gentle Boy

(Initially published as a series of essays. Presented as philosophical discussions among the residents of a boarding house, including Holmes, although apparently none of the characters or incidents were real. Includes a number of substantial poems by Holmes, passed off as the work of one of the other boarders, which I have chosen to detail.)

 CL161 50¢ Maupassant, Guy de The Best Short Stories of Guy de Maupassant [© 5/15] 1968

(Unfortunately Maupassant's oeuvre in English has been seriously distorted by the publication of a multi-volume set of "complete works" in 1903 that featured mediocre renderings of hundreds of previously untranslated stories, as well as the inclusion of as many as 65 stories that were not actually by Maupassant. Text comparisons indicate that the contents of the Airmont collection were drawn from that 1903 compilation, including one of the mis-attributed stories, marked * below.)

CL196 75c Lang, Andrew The Blue Fairy Book H. J. Ford [© 11/17] 1969

(The first of a famous series of anthologies, collecting fairy tales from a myriad of sources. Most are not of English origin; to the extent that the original sources are identified herein, they are so cited in the Author Contents Index. This edition omits a substantial Preface that attributes most of the translations and gives more details on the individual stories' origins. Contents are otherwise complete from the original edition, Longmans, Green, 1929, including some of the illustrations by H. J. Ford and G. P. Jacomb Hood)

Contents:

S16	50¢	Shakespeare, William	Complete Sonnets and Poems	[© 7/15]	1966

(This compendium has undoubtedly been published before, probably in the 1600s, but I cannot document it. The sonnets are numbered but not titled; they have not been detailed. The General Introduction by Dr. David G. Pitt is mentioned on the title Page and the notes by Lucy M. Fisher on the front and back cover; neither is present.)
