

Bottle burst while extinguishing burning car

Chotaudepur, A Maruti van suddenly caught fire near Chotaudepur State Bank. The car was gutted in the fire. In this fire, the couple in the car managed to get out of the car using timing. An empty HP bottle in the car suddenly exploded while the water cannon was being fired by the fire fighters.

Suddenly, the car caught fire due to a short circuit near Chotaudepur State Bank around 11 am, Mangubhai Motibhai Rathwa of Singla village along with his wife Manjulaben Mangubhai Rathwa had come to Chotaudepur with their Maruti van. Then, while passing by the State Bank, suddenly smoke came out of the car, both the husband and wife got out of the car by moving the car to the side.

Rallis India launches Mark Plus

soybean it provides broad spectrum control ensuring comprehensive weed management. Initially launching in Gujarat, the product will subsequently be introduced in Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra, and other key markets across the country. Mark Plus is a powerful herbicide that effectively controls a wide range of weeds in soybean and groundnut crops in the 'pre-emergence' segment. It is developed using advanced research and features a new formulation of two active ingredients being launched in India for the first time. Mark Plus operates in two distinct ways: it inhibits ALS (an enzyme essential for weed growth) and disrupts microtubule formation (critical for cell division in weeds). This dual action ensures comprehensive and long-lasting weed control. Speaking about the benefits of the newly launched herbicide product, S Nagarajan, Chief Operating Officer, Rallis India Limited, said, "We are excited to introduce Mark Plus, an effective and advanced herbicide designed to meet the critical need of weed control in groundnut and soybean crops. Pakistan's Involvement in Terrorism in J&K Exposed Once Again power for the third term. On June 11, two militants barged into a civilian house in the Saida Sukhal village near the international border with Pakistan in Kathua district of J&K, injuring the house owner. Both these militants were killed by the Indian security forces in the ensuing overnight gunfight, which also left a security personnel dead. Local police identified one of the slain militants as a top commander of Pakistan-based Jaish-e-Mohammad (JeM) militant outfit, notorious for 2019 Pulwama attack that killed 40 security forces personnel and 2001 Parliament attack that killed nine people. In the second attack on June 11, militants attacked a security forces detail in the Chattergala area of J&K's Doda district, injuring five soldiers and a policeman. Shortly afterward, in another attack militants targeted a police party at Kota Top area near Gandoh, injuring a policeman. (20-4)

Ahmedabad, In a bid to disturb peace in the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir (J&K), militants launched attacks across three districts in the southern Jammu division from June 9-12. This surge in violence follows the record voter turnout in the region during India's 18th General Elections and coincided with Prime Minister Narendra Modi's assuming of

Why Pakistan leaders' outreach to India is a non-starter

Pakistan may be trying to engage with India. On Monday, Nawaz Sharif made a direct outreach to the Indian prime minister. He posted a message on social media congratulating PM Narendra Modi for assuming office for the third time. In his message, Senior Sharif said: "Let us replace hate with hope and seize the opportunity to shape the destiny of the two billion people of South Asia."

We don't need to spell it out; Sharif is signalling that he wants to resume dialogue. Within two hours, the Indian prime minister responded, making a statement on expected lines. PM Modi said that "advancing the security" of Indians will always remain a priority. That's a reference to India's long-standing position vis-a-vis Pakistan—terror and talks cannot go together.

Especially after what happened this week, Jammu and Kashmir was attacked again. Terrorists struck a bus full of pilgrims in Reasi. Nine people died in the attack. More than 30 others were injured. The attack came on the day when PM Modi and his ministers took their oath of office, and the perpetrators were once again Pakistanis. The Resistance Front, an outfit affiliated with Pakistan-based Lashkar-e-Taiba (the same group that carried out the 2008 Mumbai terror attacks), was behind this attack. So there is no question of India reversing its policy now. PM Modi got a message from the younger brother of Nawaz Sharif and Prime Minister of Pakistan Shehbaz Sharif too. Sticking to just a one-line exchange. So the outreach by the Sharifs are a non-starter, as they have been at it for some time. Around two weeks ago, Nawaz Sharif made a significant remark. He spoke about the 1999 Kargil War and how Pakistan was responsible for it. Sharif called the Kargil war a mistake on Pakistan's part, which was a major admission in itself. Before Sharif, his daughter Maryam Nawaz too made a case for dialogue, using phrases like "don't fight wars with neighbours" and "open the doors of friendship."

PM Modi has good reasons to not trust these overtures, as when he took charge in the first term, he had put his best foot forward. In 2014, he called Nawaz Sharif for his swearing in. In 2015, he made a surprise stop in Lahore on Senior Sharif's birthday while Modi was on his way back from Afghanistan.

This was the first visit by an Indian prime minister to Pakistan in over a decade. But the optimism was short-lived, as India suffered a string of terrorist attacks in Jammu and Kashmir after that. The first was in 2016, when an Indian military base was struck in Uri. Then, again in 2019, a suicide bomber targeted Indian security forces in Pulwama.

Today, bilateral relations remain in a deep freeze. Since 2019, both countries have not posted high commissioners in each other's capitals. They were withdrawn after India made the decision to abolish Article 370, which withdrew show, which has captured audiences' hearts with its depiction of the enduring bond between sisters Mangal (Deepika Singh) and Lakshmi (Sanika Amit), is about to take an intriguing turn. While Mangal has been a constant support for her sister Lakshmi as she navigates her new married life with Kartik (Shubham Dipta), a formidable force is brewing that may disrupt the couple's happiness. It is the overbearing mother-in-law Gayatri Nigam, played by Gayatri Soham. A woman consumed by her possessiveness over her son Kartik, Gayatri is determined to undermine Lakshmi's efforts to build a loving relationship with her husband. Through subtle manipulations and creating misunderstandings, she schemes to drive a wedge between the newlyweds. For Gayatri, who has predominantly taken on positive roles throughout her illustrious career, delving into the grey shades of Gayatri's character is an exciting artistic challenge. (19-10)

Ahmedabad, Gayatri Soham, known for her diverse roles across films and television, took on an exciting new challenge in her acting career. For the first time, she is seen essaying a grey character on television through her portrayal of Kartik's possessive mother in 'COLORS' family drama 'Mangal Lakshmi'. The

Even after accepting the application, the anger of the Jains remains the same

Earlier they said - 'Additional Collector should come down and accept the application', now they say - 'We will not leave until the FIR is done'.

Navsari, The removal by the Pavagadh Mahakali Temple Trust of the 500-year-old statues of Jain Tirthankar Neminath installed next to the old steps of the Pavagadh Mahakali Temple has had deep repercussions in the entire Jain community. The leaders of the Jain Sangh went to present to the district collector in Navsari today. Where they asked the Additional Collector to come down and accept the application. However, the Additional Collector asked to file the above application as per protocol. After which anger spread in the Jain society. However, after some time the Jain Samaj went up and submitted the application, the district additional collector accepted the application. But now Jain Muni has said that he will not leave the collector's office until a complaint is registered regarding the Pavagadh incident.

office accepted the application form of the Jain leaders present, the Additional Collector went down and took the blessings of the Jain sages and interacted with them. In which they guaranteed to meet their demands. On the other hand, Jainmuni Rajhans Sureshwarji Maharaj demanded appropriate and strict action against those responsible. Also, we talked about sitting here till the complaint is not made against those responsible. After that, additional collectors also left from there.

Earlier, the entire Navsari Samast Jain Sangh had gathered at the collector's office to submit a petition to the district collector against the damage and demolition of Jain idols in Rakzak Pavagadh. Where Jain Acharya Rajhans Surishwarji also arrived at the Collector's office and he called upon all Jains to unite to protect Jainism. At this stage the Jain leaders were to go with Acharya Rajhans Surishwarji to present the application to the District Additional Collector, but later the Jain leaders insisted the Additional Collector to accept the following application.

Thrice the leaders approached the Additional Collector to insist, but the Additional Collector suggested filing the petition in the cabin. However, against the insistence of the Jains to come down and accept the application form, the Additional Collector refused to come down and appealed to 'I will come to salute Guru Maharaj but give the application in the cabin'. However, the Additional Collector left the office as the application was not filed. Jains were outraged over the whole issue and decided to sit on a silent sit-in at the Collector's office until the petition was accepted. However, later the Jain Samaj came forward and submitted the application, and the District Additional Collector accepted the application. However, even after accepting the petition, the Jain Samaj continues to agitate with the demand of complaint against the accused.

In this regard, Additional Resident Collector Ketan Joshi said that the saints and leaders of the Jain community came to the Collector's office today to file a petition on the Pavagarh dispute issue. Not accepting the application so I asked them to come up and give the application so they didn't believe so I left the office as it was my personal work. However, later the leaders of the Jain community came forward and submitted the application and accepted the application. Rajhans Sureshwarji Maharaj, who came to file the petition, said that the idols that have been broken in Pavagadh are not the idols that the Jain community is angry with, but they are actually God and our lives for us, so we demand that legal action be taken
