How BJP ended Naveen Patnaik's 24year rule in Odisha

In the intricate tapestry of Indian politics, few states exhibit the kaleidoscopic shifts and strategic manoeuvres of Odisha, where recent electoral events have unfolded like a gripping political drama. At the centre of this narrative is the Bharativa Janata Party (BJP), whose meteoric rise and triumph have reshaped Odisha's political landscape, heralding a new era of possibilities and challenges.

The BJP's victory in Odisha represents more than just a numerical win; it symbolises a seismic shift in power dynamics, ending a 24-year reign under Biju Janata Dal (BJD) chief Naveen Patnaik and establishing the BJP as a formidable force in the state's politics. With a tally of around 78 out of 147 seats, the BJP's ascendancy underscores its prowess in navigating complex electoral terrains.

What sets the BJP's triumph apart is its ability to overturn the status quo in a state long dominated by a single political entity. Through a combination of grassroots engagement, a compelling development agenda, and adept exploitation of leadership vacuums, the BJP dismantled entrenched barriers to emerge as a formidable force in Odisha's political landscape.

The party's success story is a testament to the power of strategic planning and relentless perseverance. By resonating with the aspirations of the electorate and transcending traditional fault lines, the BJP galvanised demographics. cadres and level played a pivotal role in turning the electoral tide in their favour. Moreover, the BJP's stellar performance in both Lok Sabha and Assembly elections highlights its multifaceted appeal and organisational resilience. The party's emphasis on translating electoral victories into tangible governance outcomes promises a new era of progress and prosperity for Odisha's people. However, the BJP's triumph also raises questions and challenges. With power comes responsibility, and the party must now fulfil the lofty expectations of the electorate, ushering in an era of inclusive development and prosperity. The real test lies in translating electoral success into concrete developmental outcomes, ensuring that the promises made during the growing clout and strategic campaign resonate with the realities of governance. In the midst of this electoral spectacle, another figure loomed large: V Karthikeyan Pandian. The speculation surrounding Pandian's influence and potential succession stirred the political pot, providing the BJP with a narrative to rally support. The party capitalised on the situation by highlighting the need for a political leadership focused on development rather than bureaucratic dominance. The BJP's strategy to distance itself from the controversy surrounding Pandian and focus on its development agenda paid dividends. By presenting a clear alternative to the ruling BJD, the BJP garnered significant support among voters disillusioned with the status quo. This approach support across diverse not only broadened its appeal The but also underscored the party's groundwork laid by ground- strategic acumen in navigating Odisha's complex political

South Africa has a winner. Each party has a proportional representation national ballot and a regional system chosen that brings inclusivity, is considered simple, and could also encourage governments. Here, people select a party in 10 multimember constituencies. Nine of them are corelated and the same as the nine provinces, which elect 200 seats to the 400-seat parliament. Seats are distributed in proportion to the votes a party secures. The lower house has 400 seats, and the upper house, the National Council of Provinces, has 90 seats, 10 from each of the nine provinces. The members of the upper house are nominated by each provincial legislature, much

However, the National Assembly, unlike the Lok Sabha, is based on the votes ballot, where they choose the MPs through the national or regional lists. Half the seats, coalition 200, are regional seats and are filled by regional ballots and regional lists. The other 200 are national seats and are filled by national votes and lists. Once the vote count is converted into the number of seats won, this process is first conducted on a regional basis and then on a national basis. The process is not as simple as it sounds, as it requires calculations, which is why perhaps the election results took several days after the close of the polls. The MK is keen to challenge these in court. In August 2023, the like India's Rajya Sabha. Democratic Alliance entered into a pre-poll arrangement to the emergence of the Economic Freedom Fighters and the MK, which are ANC splinters.

Zuma left the ANC in December 2023 as he was facing corruption charges, and felt that the party was not adequately backing him. He accused the ANC of becoming a front for white capitalists, and his party, the MK, is named after the military wing of the ANC during the anti-apartheid period. Zuma was disallowed from contesting the elections, but that did not prevent his MK from securing 14.6 per cent of the vote. The experience of coalitions at local levels has not been successful, but the main challenges are the levels of unemployment and perceived inequality. Estimates are that between 33 and 42 per cent of South Africa's working-age population is unemployed, which is perhaps the highest unemployment rate globally. As much as 61 per cent of those in the 15–24 age group are unemployed. The Social Policy Institute Initiative believes that 24 million out of a population of 60 million in South Africa are either unemployed or barely surviving. For better employment, South African GDP needs to grow by 6 per cent a year which it has not attained for over a decade. In afford.

governance of the ANC. The weakness of the ANC has led per cent and for the next five years, a growth rate of between 1 and 2 per cent is expected.

South Africa seems illprepared for a coalition era. The ANC did not expect such a massive dip in its fortunes, especially at the hands of Zuma. Its coalition options boil down to the investor-friendly DA or to the Zuma-led MK; the EFF does not have enough to provide the ANC with a majority unless the IFP joins the EFF and ANC to keep Zuma and the DA out. Given the state of the South African economy, they need reform and investor-friendly policies. These will not come from the EFF or even from the MK, which were the radical parts of the ANC. Zuma's condition that they will only talk to an ANC minus Cyril Ramaphosa does not seem to gel with the ANC. Having just lost its majority, the ANC would perhaps be unwilling to undergo a leadership change at the behest of Zuma. The most probable coalition may be between the ANC and DA, which have a broadened vote base beyond white populations and an investor-friendly agenda. The major points of difference are that Ramaphosa wants his health reforms and black empowerment to be nonnegotiable, which the DA believes the country can ill-
