After many years in the making, the government has signed a lease agreement with the Bahamas National Trust to oversee the preservation of Seahorse National Park at Sweetings Pond, Eleuthera.

Outgoing Minister of Agriculture, Marine Resources and Family Island Affairs, the Hon. Clay Sweeting made the announcement during a press conference held at the Ministry of Agriculture on Thursday, 7th September, 2023. He said that the project has been in the pipeline for many years.

"For consecutive governments and under the tenure of former Director of the Bahamas National Trust, Mr. Eric Carey, there have been considerable talks and efforts to getting us to this point. However, I am honored to be the Minister in the chair as this is my final act in this capacity as I pass the baton to incoming Minister, Jomo Campbell."

He said that Sweetings Pond has been a treasure for Eleuthera for decades as it is a 'unique and ecologically important' site in Eleuthera as a natural inland saltwater pond that is connected to the ocean through the blue holes. A remarkable feature of the pond, he pointed out, was its high concentration of seahorses. It is also home to small reef fish and juvenile sharks. He said that the pond serves as a vital part of Eleuthera's natural heritage.

BTVI Renovation Contract signing in GB signifies 'a renewal of hope', says Minister Hanna-Martin

During a $1.6M contract signing for renovations at BTVI on Monday, September 11, Minister of Education and Technical and Vocational Training, the Hon. Glenys Hanna-Martin said the work being done at the facility represents "renewal of hope" for the people of Grand Bahama.

She commended the Board of Directors who tirelessly worked to bring the loan to fruition.

"To build capacity (of people) to create opportunities for young people to be able to go out in their own businesses or to be a competitor in their skillset is an empowerment level that is very rarely seen, even in the academic world."

As a result, the Minister said, this will assist in building confidence, self-worth, increase self-perception and increase capacity in the marketplace while providing rewarding opportunities.

While previously having a onedimensional view of education, increasing technical skill sets will assist in meeting the global

She continued, "I am excited

because we have been mandated to develop and promote this aspect of how young people pursue their realities of who they are, what they are and do it with confidence and support."

Addressing the number of work permits being granted in this area, Minister Hanna-Martin said for about 10 years, the complaint has been that Bahamians don't have the skills. This focus will bring a renewed reality to the people of Grand Bahama and the northern region.

"We are going to see a different Bahamas because we are saying that we as a people are diverse, gifted, talented and there is a space for each of us."

The $1.6 million contract was awarded to Patrick McDonald Construction Company Ltd., and areas to be renovated and or upgraded include the entire administrative block, labs --including welding, carpentry and auto -- will all be renovated. Also included will be the addition of an auditorium by making use of the area that was used by the University of The Bahamas as a dining area. Next to this will be a new media department.

Minister for Grand Bahama, the Hon. Ginger Moxey expressed how pleased she was for the contract signing, especially after witnessing the devastation at the facility by Hurricane Dorian. The challenges faced in the aftermath, leading to classrooms being temporarily converted into offices and some classes being taken online, she added, showed the resilience of not only the staff but students as well.

"I commend your efforts thus far and I want to challenge you to become the regional leaders for technology training. The vision for Grand Bahama Island is to become the home of innovation. My ministry is diligently working to accomplish this goal.

"Currently I am the Cabinet Chair for 'Innovate242,' an initiative aimed at propelling The Bahamas into becoming the leading center of innovation for the Caribbean region. We want you to be our partners in propelling our students and island forward in the space of technology. This is crucial as we plan to be on the cutting edge of the ever-evolving demands of the job market and changing tides around the world."

In closing, the Minister added, "Finally, as you continue down the road of transformation, growth, and excellence in technical and vocational education, know that we are in this together and any support you may need, The Ministry of Grand Bahama, in consultation with the Ministry of Education, is at your disposal."

Minister Moxey says SBDC 'Level Up' seminar for entrepreneurs is a timely one in face of Innovate 242

Minister for Grand Bahama, the Hon. Ginger Moxey said the vision for the island of Grand Bahama is not just to become the home for maritime and logistics, and the home for events and entertainment, but to also become the home for innovation, where the island will pilot many of the revolutionary tech solutions to some of the challenges that the island and The Bahamas face.

Speaking at the opening of the Level Up Entrepreneurial Training seminar held at the Grand Lucayan Resort on Saturday, September 9, 2023, Minister Moxey noted that the seminar's focus on tech solutions and training businesses to digitize was appropriate.

"As the Minister for Grand Bahama, I am also the Cabinet Chair for Innovate 242, developed to propel the Bahamas as the center of innovation for the Caribbean," Minister Moxey told seminar participants.

"Innovate 242 will foster innovation, attract tech entrepreneurs, and provide a platform for collaboration on tech-centered solutions for various problems. This hub will be a nucleus for creative minds to converge and revolutionize industries."

Minister Moxey outlined the "five pillars" for Innovate 242, which include:

* The digital nomad program, with 16 islands to consider as a destination for remote work.

* Tech campuses on various islands in the Bahamas like the "we work" model including villas, hotels, restaurants and entertainment.

* Grand Bahama, as the center for sustainability and the island specifically designed to accommodate international business.

* Incubation and start-up facilitation with incubators located on three islands of the Bahamas, namely New Providence, Exuma and Grand Bahama.

* And a Bahamas tech fund, with a government committed to seed funding to support tech industry entrepreneurs in collaboration with tech hubs from around the world.

"We believe that GB is ideally situated to pilot many of the innovative tech solutions in the area of resiliency and sustainability such as tech tourism, climate change, adaptation, mitigation, renewable energy, environment and master plan development," Minister Moxey added.

"We've already signed an MOU with HUB 350 in Ottawa, Canada. We look forward in the next few weeks to signing many more agreements with major international tech hubs. A truly exciting time for the Bahamas."

Saturday's seminar, which attracted hundreds of small business owners on the island, was hosted by Access Accelerator, a program within the Small Business Development Center for close to five years. The program not only helps potential entrepreneurs incubate, birth, sustain and grow their business, it has also provided access to funding.

Thus far, the program has funded over two thousand clients throughout the Bahamas. Level Up, is a quarterly training workshop for those with start up businesses and small business owners throughout various industries.

Minister Moxey gave kudos to the program and all it has accomplished thus far, noting that the foundation and ideals are similar to those of Collab, within the Ministry for Grand Bahama.

"Ladies and gentlemen, for years Access Accelerator has pioneered new and effective ways to help fuel the entrepreneurial sector throughout our country," said Minister Moxey. "Its workshop builds on SBDC's unique purpose and shares a similar mandate with that of my Ministry.

"It is my hope that many of you will utilize what you will learn here today to propel your vision, your ideas, and your businesses to another level. To the organizers and moderator, I applaud you all for providing this creative opportunity for entrepreneurs throughout the entire island of Grand Bahama to attain valuable information."

The Grand Bahama Minister used the opportunity to speak briefly about the Collab Unit, to clearly articulate the Unit's purpose, its goals and to show how the Unit could positively impact small businesses on Grand Bahama.

The program was created as a result of a mandate of the Ministry of Grand Bahama to partner with NGOs, businesses, other government agencies and the community at large, to assist with the basic needs of residents and for the growth and development of Grand Bahama

"Through Collab," she explained, "Beautiful Grand Bahama was formed. It employs over 350 individuals who are now able to provide for themselves, put food on their tables and support small businesses such as yours. I hope you see the correlation. Our collaborations are intended to put our people in a better position, in order to spur economic growth from the ground up. We help our brothers and sisters and they in turn help you. This is what true collaboration is all

"Collab will also address some of the legacy issues that have been facing Grand Bahama for a long time. For instance, we would like to see the road that was closed open back up, we want the Bizarre situation dealt with, we want the Princess property dealt with, we want the ghetto area fixed up. We want these things dealt with and we've been working real hard over the past 24 months to make it happen. So, I'm very excited about the future. The future for our beautiful Grand Bahama is bright. But let's do it together, as we collab.

Hundreds of Grand Bahamian business owners showed up to register and participate in the Level Up Seminar at the Grand Lucayan Resort on Saturday, September 9, 2023.

He said, however, that the government was cognizant of the fact that it could not act alone and had to find strategic partnerships to work to the advantage of the Bahamian people. This agreement, he believes, is such a partnership.

He also spoke of the importance of conservation of the environment. "It is pertinent that we send a strong message of conservation, to protect the blue economy for years to come," he said. "This seahorse park is phenomenal. Featured on National Geographic and aired globally, the world now knows that in this small body of water on the island of Eleuthera resides the largest concentration and species of seahorses in the entire world. With the assistance of the BNT, this destination can be protected, preserved and regulated so that natives and visitors can experience these phenomena safely so as to ensure the growth of the population of seahorses, as they have done with the land and sea park and other national sites around the country."

He said the lease agreement aims to stike a balance between economic growth and environmental preservation, It provides guidelines and regulations for the sustainable use of Sweetings Pond, ensuring that its unique biodiversity and fragile ecosystem are protected for generations to come.

Executive Director of the BNT, Lakeisha Anderson Rolle, said that she and her team were excited to partner with the government in this venture.

After the three-year agreement, it is anticipated that the BNT will officially open the doors of the Seahorse National Park at Sweetings Pond. Sweetings Pond is a landlocked lagoon located just north of Hatchet Bay in Eleuthera.

Coming Home, Local Exumian becomes First Artist-in-Residence at Big Sampson Cay

In the super-charged reality we call our daily lives, few things -and fewer places -- still have the capacity to take our breath away. One of those is a near hidden gem that lies in the heart of The Bahamas and this week, a local artist had an opportunity to capture it as the island's first artist-in-residence. His name is Emmanuel Clarke and for the better part of five days he worked alone on the relatively undeveloped island called Big Sampson Cay, his brush strokes on canvas creating a permanent repository of the blues and greens of the waters and land around

The idea of an artist-inresidence program originated with Bob and Jeanne Coughlin, second homeowners in Exuma and the developers of a planned $50 million retreat on Big Sampson.

"Many may not be aware, but those who have crossed the path of Bob Coughlin understand he has an unwavering desire to see natural beauty preserved," explained Eric Carey, former executive director of the Bahamas National Trust. "As residents of the Bahamas the Coughlins have been doing whatever they can to support and help in every way possible with a variety of organizations, including BNT, Trust, Friends of Exuma, Run for Pompey, Tour de Turquoise."

Tour de Turquoise, the cycling event, raised more than $100,000 for Exuma causes.

Coughlin is the co-founder and president of Friends of Exuma, a 501C3 foundation that provides a means for ex-pats to donate to worthwhile causes and programs in Exuma from scholarships to environmental and cultural preservation. Its major donations to sailing have uplifted the new national sport in the islands where the native sloop regatta was born.

It was at a Paint 'n Sip event through the Arts Network and Friends of Exuma that the Coughlins first met Clarke. They shared stories of their love for the Exumas, the Coughlins purchased a painting and shared their vision for the gentle footprint, eco-development on Big Sampson Cay.

For Clarke, that accidental meeting was fortuitous. While his family is from Little Exuma, part of his family resided in the U.S. and he spent much of his youth abroad, attending high school in the U.S., college in Chicago area and continuing a post-graduate university program in France.

"The frigid cold, the exact opposite of warm sand, crystal oceans and our beautiful ecosystem," he lamented. "The Bahamas and Exuma kept calling me back. This is my home'.

When he returned, he was determined to corral his training and his travels into capturing on canvas the majesty of the land of his birth.

"I was one of the lucky people," he says. "I always knew what I wanted to do from an early age. I just wanted to design and paint and there is no place more beautiful than right here at home in the Exumas.'

As conversations continued between the artist and what would become the patron of his first residency, the idea was born.

"Let's have artists take turns, come stay on the island, use this great slice of heaven on earth and allow that to be the muse for one's talent. This would be such a cool and interesting way to share this with people that will be coming to this retreat, to see the art, be a part of it being created and share it so these works of art will make it around the world as people's prized possessions as they recount the most peaceful place on earth they've ever been," said Coughlin.

Clarke was invited to the island with little advice other than 'paint to your heart's content.'

He admits the thought of it was "a little scary' but once he was on Big Sampson, a boat ride of more than 60 miles across the chain of 365 islands and cays, he was so inspired his energy just took

"I felt alive in every way," he smiled.

"Picture this, he says, "I would take a walk along the beach at sunrise, explore spots I'd like to set up and study that area to start, eat some breakfast, I would set myself up – paint, easel, canvas, sometimes just start sketching, but always in a place where I could look in all directions and experience all the surroundings. Then in-between I would go diving in the ocean, go fish off the rocks, eat berries.

Space and peace continuously leave room for creativity. It is never ending."

As his last day of painting on the Big Sampson Cay was wrapping up, he said there was not enough time to paint all he could see. "It was an honour to be the first artist-in-residence at Big Sampson Cay," he said. "It will provide even more inspiration for artists of every age in the Exuma Arts Network and its camps. When the retreat is built, hopefully, we will be able to bring artists on a regular basis.

This is like God's canvas and I am glad it is going to be protected by someone who has the vision."

Dr. Romer also commended the proud parents of new Junior Minister, Marvin and Deathra Leathen, and congratulated the Training and Education Department at the Grand Bahama Tourism Office.

He also noted how proud and excited Ministry of Tourism executives are about the Junior Minister Program, which was launched in 2002 and replicated throughout the Caribbean in 2003, is under the leadership of School Unit Manager Samantha Cartwright.

"This breakthrough training initiative was designed to promote awareness of our leading industry among high school students. It's long-range goal is to generate a talent pool of young professionals to service our tourism industry and, by extension, our economy,' he said.

"This coveted program encourages high school students to develop leadership, public speaking, problem solving and team-building skills. It also aims to promote an understanding of the importance of tourism to our country's economy and our culture while seeking to develop leadership and entrepreneurial to improve genetic quality of herd

The Bahamas Agriculture & Marine Science Institute (BAMSI) has initiated a programme to optimise the size of its small ruminant herds (sheep and goats) and improve genetic quality. BAMSI veterinarian Dr Mark Butler said improving the herds genetic quality would ultimately provide a critical bridge to higher-quality meat production.

Dr Butler said that health and production are inseparable partners in small ruminant animal husbandry, comparing it to a harmonious

Health and production are tied together like husband and wife. If animals are unhealthy, they don't produce.

During a recent inspection exercise at the North Andros farm, Dr Butler engaged strategies to improve herd health assessments of the small ruminants. He further explained the selection process of the animals to be used in the breeding programme.

We use proven herd health criteria to select the best and healthiest animals to breed. We separated the female goats (does) and female sheep (ewes) and selected those animals we thought, based on those criteria, were the best to breed, keeping in mind the ease of getting pregnant and carrying the pregnancy to term. Selection for breeding is a crucial step in the process." We will inject new genetics into the herd by artificial insemination, natural breeding or a combination of both. This move is designed to optimize the quality of the animals produced. Currently, the BAMSI herd has a total of 197 sheep and goats.

Like most small ruminant herds, new genetics will be needed over time. BAMSI's herd is no different in this regard. Over the ensuing six months, BAMSI will introduce purebred genetics to enhance the quality of the herd for meat production. BAMSI's long-term goal is to operate as a feeder herd, providing local farmers with high-quality small ruminants to kickstart their local ventures.

The goal is to maintain a core herd at the North Andros farm while offering livestock to farmers, ensuring both quality and genetic diversity in their herds and across the Bahamas. The farmers can grow the animals for food or breed them to expand their herd.

Dr Butler said that the goal is to have the first breeding in Andros completed by November this year. He also indicated that BAMSI may collaborate with the Caribbean Agricultural Research and Development Institute (CARDI) to access technical support for artificial insemination. Introducing new genetics is a strategic move to accelerate the enhancement of the herd's genetic quality.

Improving the herd's genetics will ultimately result in animals that grow faster, yield higher-quality meat, and meet the diverse needs of farmers and consumers alike. Dr Butler emphasized the programme's significance for the food industry, stating that high-quality animals are essential for producing safe and delicious meat for local consumption. This effort aligns with BAMSI's commitment to educating farmers on animal husbandry and production techniques. The Institute's extension services will also play a pivotal role in ensuring farmers have the knowledge and resources to raise healthy and productive animals, contributing to food quality and food safety in the Bahamas. Increased small ruminant production can reduce the importation of animals. With better meat quality, local restaurants may be more inclined to buy locally —but this will not happen if animals are of low quality, he said.

Dr. Butler said that the quality of animals at BAMSI and that farmers raise directly impacts the end product (meat) that consumers

When raising animals for food, quality management systems and good animal health practices determine the final quality of what we eat-they are interconnected.

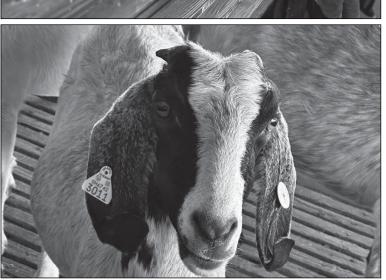

As BAMSI's herd enhancement programme progresses, it represents a crucial step towards expanding the agricultural industry and promoting high-quality, locally sourced food products in the Bahamas.
