

Small Shelter, Clifty Falls State Park, Indiana

A picturesque shelter so much in the spirit of early Indiana that doubt is aroused as to whether it has been converted from an old log cabin, reconstructed from the remnants of one, or is new construction cleverly "antiqued." The squared logs, the wide chinking and rude shake roof are characteristic of the locality.

