The Biomedical Sciences course at Jamia Hamdard has been designed so that students initially acquire an integrated understanding of biomedical science; allows them to shape their subsequent studies towards the topics that interest them the most.

Practical laboratory work form an integral part of this programme and you will be required to complete these practical elements to a satisfactory standard in order to progress through the course. As the course progresses, increasing emphasis is placed on scientific research, as students obtain first-hand experience of laboratory research in the later stages.
