of Rs 12,000 crore so far, transporters claim. With the government failing to resolve the issue, the strike will continue.

On the third day, we held rallies and protests at toll plazas and ports. Transportation services to and from the port, refineries, harbours and movement from petrochemical units, white goods and other industrial units have been stopped, the All India Motor Transport Congress stated. ENS

■ PRIYANKA PATIL, a 30-year-old nurse from Sewri, was allegedly duped of Rs 99,999 on the pretext of paying for an insurance policy on her credit card in the first week of June, of which the police claim to have retrieved Rs 49,999.

The woman had approached the police and investigations revealed that the money had been transferred to an e-wallet from where Rs 49,999 of the total was cancelled. The amount was refunded to Patil's account, said police. The police are now looking for the rest of the money.

Senior officers said cases where victims approach the police soon after the fraud and increasing awareness at the end of banks and e-wallet companies have helped them reverse fraudulent transactions

Thorat (26), former editor of a popular Marathi serial, had approached them on July 12. As per Thorat's complaint, she wanted pay her monthly rent of Rs 12,800 and, since her bank's mobile app was not working, she looked for the number of the bank on a search engine, which redirected her to an alleged fake webpage. When she dialled the mobile number,

(CRN) number on the same day and the tbank responded positively," said the officer.

An officer from the cyber police station said, "Earlier fraudsters would withdraw the money from ATMs immediately after it was transferred. However, they have realised that their footage is captured at ATMs. So, they either transfer the money to an e-wallet and ferred to some institution, be it a bank or an e-wallet, for a long period, it increases our chances of contacting the officials at the institution and get the account frozen. With the increasing misuse of bank accounts and e-wallets using forged documents, these institutions are aware about the scale of the problem. Most of them are quite co-operative

Police, said, "There is a good chance of the money being retrieved if complainants approach the police immediately after the fraud. The money remains in the system for some time and police can alert the banks in time. The number of cases where money has been retrieved before fraudsters withdraw it has increased over the years..."
